COMPANY C AWARDED CUP IN COMPETITIVE DRILL

Shows Shade Better Form in Contest Between High School Cadets.

CROWD OF 1,000 SEES DRILL

Youngsters Go Through Manual of Arms and Foot Evolutions Like Veterans—High Praise Bestowed by Col. Hodges, of V. M. I.

Displaying form a shade better than that of its competitors, Company C, of the John Marshall High School Cadet Corps, was yesterday awarded the silver loving cup offered by the Newport News. Leader to that company of the battalion showing, in competitive drill, the highest degree of efficiency in the manual of arms and military evolution. Despite threatened rain, more than 1,000 people gathered in the grand stand at Broad Street Park, where the contest was held, to witness the maneuvers of the High school boys, who, though they have not yet spent one year of military life, marched with all the precision of veterans. Major Edwin P. Conquest, commandant of the battalion, was highly pleased with the showing made by all the companies, and "Colonel" Harry L. Hodges, commandant of the Virginia Military Institute, pronounced their execution of the manual of arms "excellent," and their understanding of marching "very good."

FREEMAN PAYS TRIBUTE TO YOUNG SOLDIERS
By Douglas S. Freeman, in an appropriate speech, presented the handsome trophy to the winning company.

It was accepted by the company commander, Captain Henry W. Dickinson. Judges in the contest were Colonel Hodges, Colonel J. L. Stern, assistant inspector-general, Virginia Volunteers; Major J. Palmer Bright, of the Richmond Grays Battalion, and Captain John Cutchins, of the Richmond Light Infantry Blues.

"When it was announced in Richmond," said Dr. Freeman, in presenting the cup, "that a cadet corps was to be formed at the John Marshall High School, we were sure that the undertaking would be eminently successful. The way in which you have borne your part to-day is evidence that that opinion was not ill-founded."

"If the day should ever come when this country will face the necessity of armed defense, it will be from just such ranks as yours that she will look for protection. You are a distinct asset, not only to Richmond, which is justly proud of the remarkable progress you have made since your organization, but to the State and the nation."

The gate receipts yesterday will be used by the battalion to purchase overcoats.

AMUSEMENTS

Rare Performance at Academy.

Few performances ever given in Richmond have aroused more interest and admiration than the Price Players' presentation of Clyde Fitch's powerful drama, "The Woman in the Case." Frequently, if not generally, audiences enjoy watching stock companies with something like detached interest, unless they are interested in individual members of the organization. In this case, however, they are thrilled and swept away by the intensity of the play and its strong presentation. Catherine Proctor, who is easily the
